Man Found Alive After Eating His Own Head.

OK, so the heading to this story really has nothing to do with the story, just somewhat catchy I though.

This is to explain who that creepy guy is I used for branding. "Geesh Petranech, it's about time." His name is Lord Hate-Good and he is from the book "Pilgrims Progress" by John Bunyan written in 1678.

It's one of my favorite books of all time. Although it is rather creepy, it can reveal a great many truths about human nature.

The story is about a man named Pilgrim on a journey in the afterlife attempting to get to Heaven. Temptations of every sort hinder his way. Temptations like Despair, Doubting, Obstinate, and Pliable are some of the characters he meets. The book is incredible and well worth reading.

Now on to Lord Hate-Good (LHG). Pilgrim comes to Vanity Fair, which is a huge fair full of temptations. LHG is judge in the town and condemns Pilgrim and his companion, Faithful, to jail for their disdain for the wares offered at Vanity Fair. Faithful is condemned to death for it.

So Lord Hate-Good, in a round about way, is The Voice of Temptation. Cute 'eh? Now you know the rest of the story!

Hey Petranech, Where Do Find All These Obscure and Weird Parts?

It's a gift and a curse. Oh the pain.

I'm doing several voices for Cerebus The Aardvark. A WebTV presentation to be released in 2012. Produced and directed by Oliver Simonsen of L.A. <http://cerebus3d.com/>

Like everybody has heard of the Cerebus The Aardvark comic book series. Nope, I didn't either; however, turns out it was one of the most popular comic books of all time. Who knew, not me. But I'm proud to be working with Oliver on this very aggressive and groundbreaking project.

Oh don't worry, I'll bore you will all the details for the next two years until it comes out. I know, you can't thank me enough. Again, it's what I do. Always thinking about others.

Now here's something you'll really like!

Petranech Cast as Staring Role in Play

Cats Held Over for Third Month!

Yeah, Cats probably was held over someplace at some time, but that ain't got nothing to do with me; however, I was cast as a principle in the play "Deadwood Dick, or The Game Of Gold" with the Lakeland Players in Elkhorn Wisconsin. The play even made the cover of the world-renowned Elkhorn Independent newspaper that I of course included a copy of the article since I know you have nothing else to do than read about me. See how thoughtful I am. I think there's a run-on sentence in there

I played Blackman Redburn, the villain, Muhahahah. I was slapped, punched, poked, and eventually killed in the final act. The audience hated me! It was great. They booed, hissed, shouted insults and cheered when I finally was shot (my death scene took over five minutes). It's good to be hated. It was great fun and gained me a good deal of acting experience.

Gone With the Wind Celebrates 71st Anniversary

Again, nothing to do with me, but I though that tidbit was mildly interesting.

BUT, I am in a student movie production called "The Unfortunate Cookie" produced, filmed, and written by Zach Rudd, a senior film student at UW Milwaukee. The film is his final project and I am honored to be the star, well actually almost the only person in the film. I am a down and out janitor whose wife left and took the kids with her. Before her departure, I was studying to be an engineer, but when she left, my dreams went down the toilet. That's all back-story. In the film, I act depressed and angry as I mop floors, pick up garbage, eat burgers, and do stuff. I'm interested to see what it looks like when Zach puts it all together. He's excited, his classmates and professors all say it looks great. When it's complete of course I'll post it somewhere so you can give it a view—something I'm sure you must be dying to see. The premier will be May 2nd. I bet you've never been so excited. See how good I treat you. Shucks, it's just my way.

The Classics Never Die!

I had white space left here and I felt something else that has absolutely nothing to do with anything would be appropriate to fill the space.
